

Abstract of the Disclosure

The introduction of vibration energy such as ultrasound into an uncured adhesive matrix during and/or after the joining of substrates leads to the effective dissolution and/or dispersion of adhesion-reducing contamination of the substrate surfaces into the adhesive matrix. In many cases, this can reduce the cost of expensive cleaning processes or quality control measures.